I. Executive Summary

The Reduction and Elimination of Stigma Through Art-Targeted Education (RESTATE) Program is a stigma- and discrimination-reduction program, implemented by the Tulare County Office of Education in both Kings and Tulare Counties starting in January 2013. Over 1,000 students at 13 sites participated in the program over the course of three semesters.

The participating students were trained in Youth Mental Health First Aid (MHFA), an evidence-based course that provides an introduction to the most prevalent mental illnesses and gives participants a five-step action plan for how to assess for risk of suicide or other self-harm and encourage someone who may be at risk to get appropriate professional help and other support. The students then researched a mental health topic of their choice and, while receiving artistic and technical training, created artistic projects with a mental health theme. The projects were in a variety of media, including collages, drawings, paintings, posters, sculptures, mosaics, t-shirts, theatrical performances, and video public service announcements.

The students' completed projects were presented in venues across Kings and Tulare Counties and beyond, with the goals of educating the public about mental health, reducing the stigma of mental illness, making people aware of the resources available to help people with mental illness, and encouraging them to seek professional help and direct others to help.

The students filled out surveys immediately before and after they took MHFA and at the end of their RESTATE class. The results show that the students' knowledge of mental health, on average, increased significantly on nearly all measures from before the MHFA training to after the training. This shows that the students learned more about mental health from the MHFA training than they knew initially.

The students' knowledge level also remained at virtually the same level (at least) at the end of RESTATE as it did at the end of MHFA training, on all but one measure. In fact, on six measures the students' knowledge level was markedly higher at the end of the RESTATE class than it was at the end of MHFA training. These results demonstrate that the students not only retained their newfound mental health knowledge at the end of RESTATE; they actually gained knowledge in the remainder of the class, after MHFA training, while they were working on artistic projects with a mental health theme.

The surveys also include an assessment of stereotypical or discriminatory thinking (stigma) about people with mental illness, which was created by Dr. Patrick W. Corrigan, and the wording slightly modified to be better understood by the student population. The results show a handful of generally small but statistically significant decreases in students' stereotypical or discriminatory thinking about people with mental illness from before they took MHFA to after they completed MHFA, namely decreases in feeling sorry for, fearing, blaming, and avoiding people with mental illness.

Another positive result is that these decreases in stereotypical and discriminatory thinking continued until at least the end of the RESTATE class. Moreover, the measure of students' comfort level with people with mental illness increased significantly from the beginning of MHFA to the end of RESTATE, whereas it remained the same from the beginning to the end of MHFA training. This is an important result, because it shows that as the students learned more about mental illness and spent time working on their projects with a mental health theme, they became more comfortable with, and thus tolerant of, people with mental illness.

Since the participating students took MHFA, a majority (53%) said they noticed mental health risk factors or warning signs in other people that they learned about in MHFA or in their research on mental illness. Nearly four in ten (39%) indicated that since they took MHFA, they suspected that someone they know may have a mental illness. And over four in ten (42%) said that since they took MHFA, they tried to help someone with a possible mental illness to get help with it. If this final result reflects reality with even a moderate degree of accuracy, it represents a large number of students who have tried to get someone help with a possible mental illness, most of whom presumably would not have done so, had they not participated in RESTATE.

The students, on average, agreed that they learned a lot they did not know before they completed MHFA, that it was a good use of their time, that it was a high-quality training, and that they would recommend it to others. They also expressed satisfaction with all elements of RESTATE.

At the end of the final survey, the students were asked to respond to open-ended questions about how RESTATE helped or benefitted them, how it helped or benefitted their schools or communities, the most valuable or memorable things they learned in RESTATE, how they will use MHFA in their lives, what they liked and disliked about RESTATE, how it could be improved, and to describe the main ideas or visions behind their projects. Overall, the students provided highly positive feedback on the program and describe the positive impact that RESTATE has had on them and on their schools and communities.

The top areas in which the students say RESTATE made a positive impact on them include: (1) increased awareness and understanding of mental illnesses, the importance of getting help for mental illness, and how to help people with mental illness; (2) a reduction in stereotypical or discriminatory thinking about people with mental illness; (3) more caring and a greater desire to help others; and (4) suicide prevention.

II. Program Description

The Reduction and Elimination of Stigma Through Art-Targeted Education (RESTATE) Program is a stigma- and discrimination-reduction program, implemented by the Tulare County Office of Education in both Tulare and Kings Counties starting in January 2013. The program is designed to educate students about mental health issues through a curriculum that uses the media arts as a vehicle to promote awareness and understanding of mental health. RESTATE is a program of the Tulare and Kings Counties Suicide Prevention Task Force, supported by California Mental Health Services Act (Proposition 63) Prevention and Early Intervention funds.

Through collaboration with high school districts and other organizations in Kings and Tulare Counties, RESTATE provides funding for equipment and supplies and the implementation of a curriculum in art education/media classes.

The components of RESTATE are:

1. Students are trained in Youth Mental Health First Aid, an evidence-based course that provides an introduction to the most prevalent mental illnesses and gives participants a five-step action plan for how to assess for risk of suicide or other self-harm and encourage someone who may be at risk to get appropriate professional help and other support.
2. Students research their chosen mental health project topic.
3. Students create artistic projects with a mental health theme.
4. Completed projects are displayed in venues across Kings and Tulare Counties, to help reduce and eliminate the stigma of mental illness and to educate the public about mental illness as well as the local availability of help for people with mental illness.

The goals of RESTATE are:

- Coordinate stigma reduction efforts among government agencies, community-based organizations, and school districts through the use of an existing body, the Tulare and Kings Counties Suicide Prevention Task Force.
- Prevent the development of mental health stigma, stereotyping, and discrimination through a public mental health awareness campaign.
- Educate the public about community resources available to assist with mental health-related crises.
- Promote initiatives, programs, and curricula to change school cultures and increase social inclusion and social acceptance.
- Deliver mental health education in natural community settings through the creation and implementation of a mental health curriculum.
- Empower youth to educate their community about mental health issues.

III. Classes and Student Projects

A. Classes

RESTATE has been offered for three semesters thus far at 13 sites in Kings and Tulare Counties, with 1,069 students participating. For the most part, RESTATE has been offered in art, video production, and theater classes. Table 3-1 shows the sites where RESTATE classes have been offered as well their locations and the number of students who took each class in the spring and fall semesters (January-December) of 2013 and the spring semester (January-June) of 2014.

B. Student Projects

Participating students completed a wide variety of projects. These include collages, drawings, paintings, posters, sculptures, mosaics, t-shirts, theatrical performances, and video public service announcements. The following pages show three projects displayed at the RESTATE Showcase in Hanford on January 30, 2014.

C. Dissemination of Student Projects

As shown in Table 3-2, students' RESTATE projects have been displayed at a variety of venues in Kings and Tulare Counties, as well as at the American Association of Suicidology Annual Conference in Los Angeles, in 2014.

IV. Participants

A. Gender

Of the 1,004 students who filled out initial surveys, 521 (52%) are female, 480 (48%) are male, and three (3) students indicated that they are “Other (e.g., intersex, questioning).” (Note that, due to rounding, the category percentages on some graphs do not total 100%.)

B. Age

Of the 954 students who answered the question on the initial survey, 253 (27%) are age 12-14 years old, 205 (21%) are 15 years old, 153 (23%) are 16 years old, 206 (22%) are 17 years old, and 74 (8%) are 18-20 years old.

C. Race/Ethnicity

Of the 976 students who responded to the survey question, 725 students indicated they are Latino, 208 are White, 56 are American Indian or Alaskan Native, 33 are African-American, nine (9) Southeast Asian, 13 are Other Asian, eight (8) are Native Hawaiian or Pacific Islander, and 10 are “Other.” Students were able to select multiple categories.

D. Previous Education or Training in Mental Health

Of the 934 students who answered the question, 174 (19%) indicated that they have previous education or training in mental health. Of these students, 148 described their previous education or training in mental health. The most common responses were a Freshmen Studies class (73), education in mental health/psychology (9), education in eating disorders (5), and the Gang Resistance Education and Training (G.R.E.A.T.) Program (4).

V. Outcomes

A. Knowledge of Mental Health

Three times during RESTATE, participating students were asked to respond to statements testing their knowledge of mental health, as taught in the Youth Mental Health First Aid (MHFA) course. These questions were provided by MHFA and were administered at three time points: before students took MHFA, immediately after they took MHFA, and at the end of RESTATE. Students were asked to indicate whether they agreed or disagreed with the statements or whether they did not know the answer. In the spring semester of 2014, the list of questions was revised to reflect better, in the opinion of the MHFA instructors, the material actually being taught and emphasized to the students.

1. Changes in Knowledge After Youth Mental Health First Aid

This section reviews students' mental health knowledge before they took MHFA, near the beginning of RESTATE, and immediately after they completed MHFA. We report only the responses of students who answered the specified survey questions at both time points, right before and immediately following MHFA.

In order to gauge participants' knowledge of mental health before and after the workshop, the developers of MHFA wrote statements for participants to respond to (agreeing or disagreeing with them), both immediately before and immediately following the training. We initially selected 15 of these statements for our evaluation. The statements are:

1. "It is not a good idea to ask someone if they are feeling suicidal in case you put the idea in their head." (False)
2. "Schizophrenia is one of the most common mental disorders." (False)
3. "If someone has a traumatic experience, it is best to make him or her talk about it as soon as possible." (False)
4. "Males complete suicide four times more frequently than females." (True)
5. "Antidepressant medication works right away." (False)
6. "It is best to get someone having a panic attack to breathe into a paper bag." (False)
7. "A first-aider can distinguish a panic attack from a heart attack." (False)
8. "Exercise can help relieve depressive and anxiety disorders." (True)
9. "People with psychosis usually come from dysfunctional families." (False)
10. "It is best not to try to reason with people having delusions." (False)
11. "People who talk about suicide don't attempt suicide." (False)
12. "Psychosis is a lifelong illness." (False)

13. “People with psychosis are more at risk of being victims of violent crime.” (True)
14. “Smoking is much more common among people with mental health problems.” (True)
15. “People with mental health problems tend to have a better outcome if family members are not critical of them.” (True)

Beginning in 2014, we deployed the following additional or revised questions, that the MHFA instructors of RESTATE students believed better reflected what they actually taught and emphasized to the students as part of MHFA:

1. “If someone is giving away prized personal possessions, it could be a sign of suicidal thoughts.” (True)
2. “The sooner an individual gets help, the more likely he or she is to have a positive outcome.” (True)
3. “Males complete suicide more often than females.” (True)
4. “Medication is often the sole treatment for mental health disorders.” (False)
5. “Changes in eating habits are a physical change that can occur when someone is in crisis.” (True)
6. “A Mental Health First Aider’s role is to give advice to individuals showing risk factors.” (False)
7. “Withdrawing from friends, family, and social activity is TYPICAL adolescent behavior.” (False)
8. “A person’s culture is something that needs to be considered when you are listening nonjudgmentally.” (True)
9. “Seasonal changes can be a risk factor for people with mental health problems.” (True)
10. “Avoiding alcohol, tobacco, and other drugs is a protective factor for people with mental health problems.” (True)

The following three graphs show the percentage of participants who responded to each statement correctly at each time point (before the workshop in blue and after the workshop in green). Figure 5-1 shows the percentage of participants who answered correctly five questions that remained the same over the entire time period (January 2013 – June 2014) while Figures 5-2 and 5-3 present responses to ten questions that were asked only in 2013.

Red asterisks indicate that the difference between the pre and post responses is statistically significant (one-tailed t-test and at least a 95% confidence level). There were statistically significant differences in responses to 14 of the 15 statements, including all five statements that were included in surveys in both 2013 and 2014. These results provide good evidence that the participants who completed MHFA, on average, did learn things they did not know before about mental health from the course.

The increases in percentages of participants who answered the questions correctly vary substantially from question to question. For instance, in Figure 5-1, the percentage who disagreed with the false statement, “It is not a good idea to ask someone if they are feeling suicidal in case you put the idea in their head.” increased from 38% to 59%, while there was only a one percentage point increase in the percentage of participants who disagreed with the false statement, “If someone has a traumatic experience, it is best to make him or her talk about it as soon as possible.” One fairly large increase is in the percentage of students who agreed with the true statement that males complete suicide four times more often than females (increasing from 12% to 24%). (See Figure 5.2.)

It is also important to note the statements that most participants answered correctly before they took the course. It is gratifying to see in Figure 5-1, for instance, that before they took MHFA, 63% of the participants disagreed with the false statement, “People who talk about suicide don’t attempt suicide.” Similarly, before MHFA, 59% of participants disagreed with the false statement, “Antidepressant medication works right away.” In addition, before the course, 64% of participants agreed with the true statement, “Exercise can help relieve depressive and anxiety disorders.”

The graphs in this section show only the percentage of students who responded correctly to the statements at each time point. Graphs showing all responses (correct, incorrect, and “don’t know”) are included at the end of this report in Appendix 1.

The following two graphs show the percentage of MHFA participants who responded correctly to ten statements that were included on the surveys only in 2014. There were statistically significant increases in the percentage of students who responded correctly to eight of the ten statements. These results also provide solid evidence that the participants who completed MHFA, on average, learned information about mental health from MHFA that they did not previously know.

There was a marked increase in the percentage of students who agreed with the true statement, “If someone is giving away prized personal possessions, it could be a sign of suicidal thoughts.” And there was a large jump in the percentage who agreed with the true statement, “Males complete suicide more often than females.” This latter statement is a revised, less specific, version of the statement from the 2013 version of the survey. (See Figure 5.4.)

2. Changes in Knowledge over the Entire RESTATE Class

The following graphs compare the participating students' responses to the same statements, both before they took MHFA and at the end of RESTATE. The hope is that the students will retain much of the knowledge about mental health that they learned in MHFA until the end of RESATE. We report only the responses of students who answered the specified survey questions at both time points, before they took MHFA and at the end of the RESTATE class.

The first graph, Figure 5-6, presents the number of participants who responded correctly to statements both before they took MHFA and at the end of the RESTATE course, from January 2013 through June 2014. Figures 5-7 and 5-8 present the data on statements that were included only on surveys in 2013.

Once again, red asterisks indicate statistically significant differences in responses from the initial to the final time point. There were statistically significant differences in responses to 13 of the 15 statements, including all five that were included on surveys in both 2013 and 2014. These results provide good evidence that the participants who completed MHFA, on average, learned information about mental health from MHFA that they did not previously know, and that their knowledge was significantly higher at the end of RESTATE than it was before they took MHFA. Their knowledge level on the statements presented in Figures 5-6 to 5-9 is also similar (within a few percentage points) their knowledge levels at the end of MHFA.¹

The biggest difference is that there was a significant increase in knowledge about delusions from before MHFA to after MHFA, whereas there was no significant increase from before MHFA to the end of the RESTATE class. This indicates that the students did not recall the information on delusions at the end of RESTATE that they learned in MHFA. (See Figures 5-3 and 5-8.)

¹ The “pre-MHFA” percentages are slightly different between the two graphs (pre-MHFA and post-MHFA versus pre-MHFA and post-RESTATE) because the groups of students and the questions they chose to answer are slightly different. Some students who took the post-MHFA survey did not take the post-RESTATE survey, or vice versa, and students skipped different questions. For each question, analysis is performed only for students who answered the question at both time points of comparison.

Figures 5-9 and 5-10 show the percentage responding correctly to the ten statements that were added in 2014, both before students took MHFA and at the end of RESTATE. The students' increases in knowledge were all statistically significant. Most of the changes in knowledge are larger from before MHFA to the end of RESTATE than from before MHFA to after MHFA. The statements are:

1. "If someone is giving away prized personal possessions, it could be a sign of suicidal thoughts." (True) (71% answered correctly after MHFA versus 79% after RESTATE)
2. "The sooner an individual gets help, the more likely he or she is to have a positive outcome." (True) (81% answered correctly after MHFA versus 89% after RESTATE. The latter change from before MHFA is statistically significant, but not the former.)
3. "Medication is often the sole treatment for mental health disorders." (False) (56% answered correctly after MHFA versus 73% after RESTATE)
4. "Changes in eating habits are a physical change that can occur when someone is in crisis." (True) (75% answered correctly after MHFA versus 81% after RESTATE)
5. "A person's culture is something that needs to be considered when you are listening nonjudgmentally." (True) (59% answered correctly after MHFA versus 74% after RESTATE)
6. "Avoiding alcohol, tobacco, and other drugs is a protective factor for people with mental health problems." (True) (64% answered correctly after MHFA versus 86% after RESTATE. The latter change from before MHFA is statistically significant, but not the former.)

These results are very encouraging, because they indicate that, as expected, through the process of students researching their own mental health topics and completing artistic projects related to mental health, the students learned more about mental health than they did by just taking MHFA.

However, the percentage who answered one statement correctly was notably lower after RESTATE than it was following MHFA: A Mental Health First Aider's role is to give advice to individuals showing risk factors. (False) (47% after MHFA versus 39% after RESTATE). This result may indicate a need to reiterate to the students one or more times after MHFA the limited role that Mental Health First Aiders should play.

B. The Stigma of Mental Illness

1. Changes in Responses After Youth MHFA

We included a modified assessment of mental health stigma attribution in surveys before and after MHFA and at the end of RESTATE. The assessment, called the AQ-8-C, was developed and made publicly available by one of the foremost scholars on mental health stigma, Distinguished Professor Patrick W. Corrigan, Psy.D., who serves as the Director of the National Consortium on Stigma and Empowerment. The wording of the assessment was modified to place the scenario and questions in a school setting and to increase the cultural relevance (changing the name of the person in the scenario from Charlie to Anna). The wording of the questions was modified slightly, to make it more familiar and comprehensible to the students, e.g. changing “pity” to “feel sorry for.”

The following is the assessment's introductory paragraph along with the statements and questions:

"Anna is a new student in your class. Before Anna's first day, you heard a rumor that Anna has a mental illness."

1. "I would feel sorry for Anna."
2. "I would feel comfortable if I were assigned to work in a group with Anna."
3. "How scared of Anna would you feel?"
4. "I think Anna or her parents are to blame for her mental illness."
5. "Anna should be in a different type of class than mine."
6. "How angry would you feel at Anna?"
7. "How likely is it that you would help Anna with schoolwork?"
8. "I would try to stay away from Anna during breaks and after school."

I hypothesize that participation in RESTATE (including Mental Health First Aid training) will make at least some of the participants more sensitive to the plight and needs of people with mental illness and, thus, be less likely to hold stereotypical or discriminatory opinions of them.

The next two figures display the results from both before and immediately following MHFA training. In Figure 5-11 we see statistically significant declines in the mean ratings for "I would feel sorry for Anna," "How scared of Anna would you feel?", and "I think Anna or her parents are to blame for her mental illness." The 0.7-point decline in the rating for "I would feel sorry for Anna" is the largest, with the other drops of 0.2 points each.

In Figure 5-12 we find only one statistically significant change, namely a 0.2-point decline in the mean rating of "I would try to stay away from Anna during breaks and after school." (avoidance).

While, overall, these changes are not large, they do show changes in RESTATE students' views of people with mental illness in the direction of greater understanding and tolerance.

2. Changes in Responses over the Entire RESTATE Class

The next two figures show the results both before MHFA and at the end of the RESTATE class. They are largely similar to those before and after MHFA, presented above. In Figure 5-13 we find a large statistically significant decline in the mean rating for “I would feel sorry for Anna” (a 1.0-point drop) and smaller declines in the mean ratings for “How scared of Anna would you feel?” and “I think Anna or her parents are to blame for her mental illness” (0.2-point declines). At the same time, there was a 0.5-point increase in the mean rating of “I would feel comfortable if I were assigned to work in a group with Anna.” All of these results are in the expected direction.

However, this graph also shows that the students’ comfort level with people with mental illness increased significantly, by 0.4 points, from before MHFA to the end of RESTATE, whereas it just remained the same from before to after MHFA. This indicates that the process of students learning about mental health topics and working on their own artistic projects with a mental health theme increased the students’ comfort level with people with mental illness. This is an important result.

In Figure 5-14 we see only one statistically significant change, namely a 0.2-point decline in the mean rating of “I would try to stay away from Anna during breaks and after school” (avoidance), which is the same decline as from before MHFA to after MHFA.

C. Self-Reported Impact on Participants (Closed-Ended Questions)

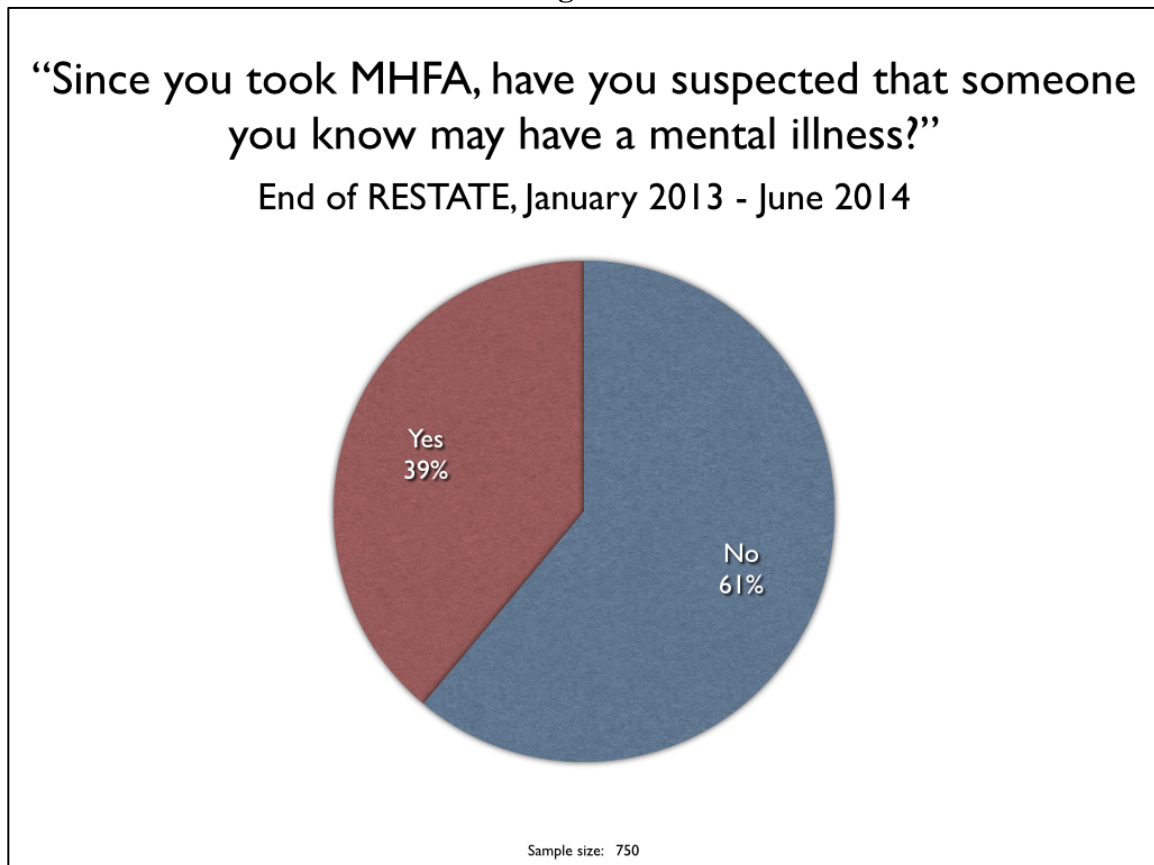

At the end of RESTATE, we asked students to answer additional questions, to help gauge the impact of RESTATE on them. When asked, “Since you took Mental Health First Aid, have you noticed any mental health risk factors or warning signs in other people that you learned about in Mental Health First Aid or in your research on mental illness?” Three hundred and ninety four (394) students (53%) responded “Yes,” while the remaining 348 (47%) replied negatively.

When asked, “Since you took Mental Health First Aid, have you suspected that someone you know may have a mental illness?” Two hundred and ninety (290) students (39%) responded “Yes,” while the remaining 455 (61%) replied “No.”

When asked, “Since you took Mental Health First Aid, have you tried to help someone with a possible mental illness to get help with it?” Three hundred and twelve (312) students (42%) responded affirmatively, while the remaining 431 (58%) replied “No.”

It is particularly noteworthy that if the students’ affirmative response of 42% reflects reality with even a moderate degree of accuracy, it represents a large number of students who have tried to get someone help with a possible mental illness, most of whom presumably would not have done so, had they not participated in RESTATE.

D. Participant Feedback on Mental Health First Aid

At the end of Mental Health First Aid, we asked the students to rate four elements of the training. As shown in the graph below, the students' mean ratings of all four elements all fall on or very close to "Agree." The rated elements are:

- "I learned a lot in this training that I did not know before,"
- "The training was a good use of my time,"
- "The quality of the training was high," and
- "I would recommend this training to others."

E. Participant Satisfaction with RESTATE

At the end of RESTATE, we asked the students to rate their level of satisfaction with eight elements of the program. The mean ratings of all of the elements are displayed in the next two figures. In Figure 5-19 the mean ratings all fall on or very close to “Satisfied.” The rated elements are:

- “Choosing the mental health topic of your project,”
- “Doing research to learn more about the mental health topic you chose,”
- “Learning the artistic or technical skills you needed to create your project,” and
- “Getting help with your project from your teacher.”

- “Now we will be less judgmental and more helpful to people with mental illnesses.”
- “It helped people stand up for others with mental disorders.”

Suicide Prevention

- “RESTATE helped me a lot because I had a friend and she had the symptoms of suicide and I remembered all the things I learned in class. I remembered ALGEE.”
- “It helped me because I could help people who might need help in case of self harm or suicide.”
- “It helped us by knowing the signs of people thinking of doing suicide so we can help them.”

Miscellaneous

- “Our school is a better and nicer place to be.”
- “It shows we care for people.”
- “It's a good thing to help others.”
- “It made the school closer.”
- “Many people see the community in a more healthy way.”

3. The Most Valuable/Memorable Thing Participants Learned in RESTATE

In the final survey in the spring of 2013, we asked the students, “What is the most memorable thing you learned in RESTATE?” In the fall of 2013 and the spring of 2014 we changed the wording slightly to “What is the most valuable thing you learned in RESTATE?”

The top responses, by category, are:

- Increased awareness and understanding of mental illnesses, the importance of getting help, and how to help people with mental illness (160 responses)
- Stigma reduction (51)
- Suicide prevention (35)
- More caring and helping (14)

The following are some particularly noteworthy student responses:

Increased Awareness and Understanding of Mental Illnesses, the Importance of Getting Help, and How to Help People with Mental Illness

- “It helped me when a person I knew had a hard time, and because of RESTATE I knew what to tell her.”
- “The most valuable thing that I learned in RESTATE is that if we know the signs we can help many people and save a life.”
- “It helped me be aware of how to look for signs of someone who is mentally ill and help them.”
- “The most valuable thing I learned was that many people have mental disorders and sometimes you should help them.”
- “I learned how to help someone with a mental illness, and how to lead them to the right direction.”
- “The most valuable thing I’ve learned in RESTATE is to not give advice just listen. Listen and not judging them and give them help if you feel like they really need it.”

Stigma Reduction

- “Anybody can have a mental illness. You just have to help them out.”
- “The most valuable thing I learned in RESTATE is not to judge others with a mental illness.”
- “The most valuable thing that I learned was that people with mental problems are not much different from us.”

- “The most valuable thing I learned is that everyone could have a mental illness even if they are not mentally disabled.”
- “I learned that it’s important to treat people with special illnesses like any other person.”
- “That not everyone is the same, and we have to learn to accept others, even when they are different”
- “The most valuable thing I learned from this, is to help others who need help and be there, also not judge them because we shouldn’t judge anybody for being born with a disease.”
- “I have learned how hard it really is for people with mental health problems.”

Suicide Prevention

- “The most valuable thing I have learned was to know when someone is having suicidal thoughts. Also to not tell them what to do but stay with them at all times till we get professional help.”
- “To take death thoughts very seriously”
- “People who commit suicide talk about it.”
- “I learned how to see if a friend or relative are at risk of suicide or depression.”

More Caring and Helping

- “The most valuable thing that I learned in RESTATE is to always try to help if you can.”
- “That helping others can make a difference”

Art and Self-Expression

- “RESTATE allowed me to not only understand and become more aware of mental illness but the program allowed me to express mental health conditions through art.”
- “It encouraged me to make mental health art for other people to understand mental health better.”
- “It helped me get the frustration and pain out that I’ve built up over the years.”

4. How Participants Will Use Mental Health First Aid in Their Lives

In the final survey in the fall of 2013 and the spring of 2014, we asked the participating students, “How will you use Mental Health First Aid in your life?”

The top responses, by category, are:

- To help people with mental illness (208 responses)
- Suicide and self-harm prevention (18)
- How often they will use Mental Health First Aid (16)
- I don’t know (14)
- To notice signs of mental illness (11)
- To be more aware and sensitive when interacting with people with mental illness (9)

The following are some especially noteworthy student responses:

To Help People with Mental Illness

- “I will use Mental Health First Aid in my life by helping those around me who need help.”
- “I will use it because if I ever have problem with either my friends, family or loved ones because I don’t want everyone to get hurt.”
- “It will help with people I go to school with, work with, my family and friends and even just strangers.”
- “Someday I will help someone going through a crisis.”

Suicide and Self-Harm Prevention

- “I think that I will use it to prevent myself, my friends and my family from committing suicide or self harm.”
- “I think that if I knew friends who were thinking of killing themselves, I would know what to do.”

To Notice Signs of Mental Illness

- “I think I will use Mental Health First Aid in my life by knowing the signs and symptoms of a mental illness.”
- “I will use it in my life to see if anyone in my life goes through these problems.”

To Be More Aware and Sensitive When Interacting with People with Mental Illness

- “I will use this in my life by not being quick to judge people.”
- “I will be more sensitive toward people.”

Future Career

- “Maybe I would try to go to college for it because it is very interesting and I like it.”
- “By making it a profession”
- “Since I want to be a doctor, I will see lots of people. No one is the same so I will be able to help everyone.”

5. Student Project Ideas and Visions

In the final survey, we asked the students, “If you already chose a project for RESTATE and have started working on it, what is the main idea or vision behind your project and why did you choose that main idea or vision?” We asked this question of students in the fall of 2013 and the spring of 2014.

The top responses, by category, are:

- Depression (39 responses)
- Awareness and acceptance of mental illness and stigma reduction (29)
- Helping people with mental illness (24)
- Suicide and suicide prevention (18)
- Hope (16)
- Bipolar disorder (15)
- Bullying/cyberbullying (10)
- Schizophrenia (7)
- Alcohol and other drug use (6)
- Anxiety (5)
- Encouraging others (5)
- Self-harm (5)

The following are some especially noteworthy student responses:

Depression

- “Depression - I chose it because I am, well was, depressed at one point in my life.”
- “For my project I chose to do it on depression. I chose depression because a lot of people in school could be feeling depressed inside but no one would notice. On one side of my project I put a very dark and sad side for the way the person may be feeling inside. On the other side I put a more pretty and cheerful side with compliments because I think that is the side people try to make you feel good with compliments but you’re so focused on the negative comments that make you feel depressed.”

Awareness and Acceptance of Mental Illness and Stigma Reduction

- “My main idea was understanding those who have a mental illnesses. We often hear the phrase ‘Walk a mile in their shoes’ but few really attempt to put themselves there.”
- “Having a mental illness does not make you crazy.”

Helping People with Mental Illness

- “My project main idea would be, ‘It’s okay to ask for help.’”
- “The main idea of my project is to let the people know that some people need help.”
- “The main idea of the project is a girl who is struggling and wants help. She is saying what she is feeling and doing, she is also saying how it would be like if she got help.”

Suicide and Suicide Prevention

- “Mine was suicide because I have had many thoughts of suicide while at home, school, etc.”
- “Suicide is my topic and I chose it because I have a cousin do that and it made me want to learn more.”
- “My project was about unhealthy relationships. The reason I chose it was because many girls/ladies are in unhealthy relationships that make them get to the point of killing themselves or their partners.”
- “It’s a painting. It’s a girl with orange hair blue/turquoise eye shadow, blue and yellow tears. She is depressed and tells herself she has nothing to offer. The cars and eye shadow are all the potential she has and her hair is all the life she has, all of the sunshine in her heart. The quotes are telling her not to commit suicide (bottom) (top) is her saying that no one understands.”
- “My project was a hand figure made out of clay I carved ‘reach out’ on it so people could learn to lend a hand and help someone who is showing symptoms of depression or suicide.”
- “The main idea of my project is to inform people that a person may look okay or happy but it’s not always what it seems, they might be suicidal. I choose this because there are many suicidal people out there.”
- “My main idea for my project was suicide. I painted a tree with a noose on it, the noose represented suicide or death. The tree represented life and new beginnings.”
- “Two sided art, one shows what ends a life and other saves a life.”

Hope

- “There is a light at the end of the tunnel. Me and my friends cut up our depressing poetry and glued the pieces into a new hopeful poem signifying new hope and a better tomorrow. If it got better for me it can be better for anyone.”
- “The main idea of my project is to show people that not all has been lost. There is still hope and help.”

- “I chose it because I want ‘light’ to shine out of my project as a beacon of hope and show by handprints that everyone is included. I chose that idea because it makes it easier to deal with mental illness.”
- “I chose a bridge to represent and tell someone with problems that there is always a better side.”
- “I chose to do a mermaid but she is not a happy mermaid, she was laying down with white around her - hope and getting rid of the other darkness around her.”

Bipolar Disorder

- “My main idea for my project was to let people know that bipolar disorder is something very serious to me and it should be to everyone else. I chose what I chose because in my household bipolar disorder is common. People tend to have two characters: one where they’re seeming happy and another where they’re trapped in their own head. Depression.”
- “My project was two masks. One mask was happy and the other was sad. This represented bipolar. How people have their up and downs, and how being happy is better and more powerful.”
- “I created a tree, half was full of life and showed someone happy, but on the other side it’s gray and dark showing someone is sad. The main idea behind all of this was to show bipolarity.”
